Notes for John Barcham GREEN:

Hayle Mill was renowned for making fine, handmade paper - especially artists' watercolour and printing paper. It was built in 1808, and operated by the Green family from 1813 to 1987, when the production of handmade paper ended. Unfortunately, the mill house was destroyed by fire in June 2003 but the Mill itself was saved and is presently being converted to accommodate residential units, but some areas in the complex will be preserved as an industrial heritage site. Work on the Mill will be completed by 2008. The Green family also kept all the Mill's production records, and this now comprises the Hayle Mill Archive, still in family ownership. Simon Barcham Green's wife is presently working on a book about the Mill, which will be published by the Janus Press.
